A winning combination for Piper Alderman and CEAG

Full service, commercial law firm Piper Alderman formed a unique alliance with CEAG, Europe's leading independent emissions trading and contracts specialist, to deliver an enlightening emissions trading scheme workshop in Perth last week.

Building on themes from the annual APPEA conference, the workshop offered delegates the opportunity to discuss controversial issues currently causing concern in Australia. Attendees included leading industry figures from the resources sector who were eager to liaise with national and international experts to understand how to effectively prepare their businesses for the impending reforms.

Liz Bossley, CEO of CEAG, headlined the workshop, with over 25 years experience in global energy markets. She was supported by Tim Hanlin, MD of Australian Climate Exchange Limited, Robert Pritchard, MD of ResourcesLaw International and Gordon Grieve, Managing Partner of Piper Alderman.

Gordon hailed the event and the new alliance a resounding success.

“The workshop was an excellent opportunity to highlight the importance of emissions trading and associated resources matters. Piper Alderman is delighted with the response from businesses all around Australia and our new alliance with CEAG strengthens our capabilities, allowing us to provide innovative and practical solutions to the challenges of the exciting global energy markets”.
